ABSTRACT

This reading program is based on a cognitive learning theory which gives the student the opportunity to build a learning model and continually refine it through practice activities. Each activity in the CD-ROM-based reading program offers a variety of modalities and features individual feedback. Review tests throughout the course help mastery and long-term retention. A classroom teacher or aide can utilize a series of reports from the program to monitor student progress and teach reading comprehension techniques and strategies. The program may be adapted to whole-class, small group, or individualized instruction. It includes 47 interactive lessons and 12 comprehension activities using programmed text. (PM)
